

Richard Martin

Richard Martin has gained extensive experience in intergovernmental relations, both nationally and internationally, during his career with the federal government.

With an eclectic and analytical mind, he participated in the negotiation and implementation of bilateral projects and promoted Canada abroad, notably through forums such as APEC, the Carnegie Group on Science, Technology and Innovation, the OECD, the Summit of the Americas, and UNESCO.

He has also worked in the private sector, as Director of the Global Program and Government Relations at a national Chamber of Commerce, where he organized numerous conferences and trade missions aimed at strengthening ties between Canadian diverse businesses and international markets.

Finally, he has served on various boards of directors and contributed to his community, including through a university mentoring program.

Richard Martin holds degrees in history from the universities of Sherbrooke and Ottawa.
